Website Project

Title: The Tiny Tomato: Where drawing takes root!

Description: This website will be dedicated to teaching the user how to draw. I want to include not only a blog like website with updates on different drawing topics but videos as well (made by me). The title is due to my instagram where I used to sell my artwork in high school. I want to include blogs, videos, comment sections, and a fun “spin wheel” where users can spin to get something random to draw to help with “artblock”. I want to create this website to not only further my love for drawing but help others who might want to start the hobby.

Pages: About Tinytomato, Blog, Inspiration station, Gallery, Feedback

Data Stored: Blogs will feature drawing tips, techniques, and inspiration, while videos will offer step-by-step tutorials, both curated by the administrator (Me). Users will be able to comment on and engage with this content, creating a dynamic community. The Spin Wheel will pull from a library of curated prompts categorized by difficulty and theme, providing endless inspiration for artists. Administrators (Me) will manage all content, including blogs, videos, prompts, and user activity, ensuring high-quality resources and functionality. With secure login systems, user-friendly features, and optional analytics for improving content based on user preferences, the website will be a creative space where art enthusiasts of all levels can learn, explore, and grow.
